AVISTA HOSTS PUBLIC MEETING ON INTEGRATED RESOURCE PLANS
Customers are invited to give feedback on electric and natural gas plans

Avista Utilities is hosting a virtual public meeting on Wednesday, February 24, 5-7 p.m. to gather public feedback on its electric and natural gas integrated resource plans.

The integrated resource plan (IRP) looks at the next 20 years to determine how much electricity and natural gas will be needed and where those resources could come from while balancing reliability, cost and environmental sustainability. Public input is integral to the process, and feedback from stakeholders helps shape the final plans, which are submitted to utility commissions in each state we serve.

The public meeting will begin with a presentation on each plan and give an opportunity for questions. Then participants will have the chance to select from a variety of topic areas to learn more and give direct feedback.

More information about both plans can be found at myavista.com/IRP. Anyone interested in attending needs to register to receive the details.

ECONOMIST SHARES LINCOLN COUNTY 2020 EMPLOYMENT DATA

The board of directors for the Lincoln County Economic Development Council (EDC) recently met to discuss 2021 and the challenges it presents to local business and industry. Doug Tweedy, regional economist for the Employment Security Department, joined the meeting to provide 2020 workforce data that could inform their discussion. The board learned that after an exceptionally difficult year for local businesses, the road forward looks surprisingly positive.

Not all the news was good of course. Lincoln County's unemployment in 2020 was higher than typical. Approximately sixty more workers lost jobs and filed for unemployment in 2020 than in 2019. Over half of unemployment claims resulted from four clusters: Food prep and service; management; office and administrative support; and sales and sales-related. These clusters were affected by the pandemic, either by the state's restrictions, the move to teleworking, or increased online buying.

The positive news is that rural labor forces in Eastern Washington generally fared better in 2020 than urban labor forces and Lincoln County fared especially well. Tweedy shared that Lincoln County was the only rural county in Eastern Washington to see local jobs increase. Most of those jobs were in construction, utilities, and transportation.

Another positive trend that Employment Security data revealed was that Lincoln County saw a net in-migration increase in population. As is characteristic of our aging populace, the county saw a natural decrease with deaths outnumbering births. However, enough new people moved to Lincoln County to offset the natural decrease and increase the population. Data shows that more than half of those who moved in to Lincoln County came from the west side of the state and that most were in the 26 to 35 age range.

Tweedy reported that in addition to the population increasing last year, wealth also increased, both in per capita income and median household income. According to ESD data, earning increases were larger for the 50% of Lincoln County's workforce that commutes outside the county for work.

Employment Security anticipates that telework and telehealth will be permanent trends and recommends that communication infrastructure be the top priority for all rural counties that want to experience growth. Fortunately, expanding broadband access is already a priority for the EDC.
